893 pinwheels, what does each mean?

Guadalupe County Children's Advocacy Center shares insight into the local abuse of children

Cindy Aguirre-Herrera

(Seguin) – Now that you have had days in which to travel by those patches of pinwheels planted in areas across Guadalupe County, it's finally time to uproot the significance of each one.

On April 1, the Guadalupe County Children's Advocacy Center set up batches of 893 pinwheels each at 15 locations across the area. The 893 recognizes the number of children served by the advocacy center in 2021. The awareness effort is done annually in observance of April as Child Abuse Prevention and Awareness Month.

Christy Williams, the executive director of the advocacy center, says the pinwheels help to illustrate the number of children abused and neglected and the service that was provided to each victim this past year at the local non-profit program.

"Each one of those pinwheels at each site signifies one child who came through the doors of the children's advocacy center to receive specialized services from our center whether that be a forensic interview or counseling services, their supportive family members have come and gotten resources and an advocacy session of support and ongoing advocacy calls. Every single one of those kids is part of a case that was then just staffed at our monthly case review meetings to ensure that all of their needs are being met and they are not falling through the cracks so those are all the children that came through our doors last year," said Williams.

Williams says unfortunately the COVID-19 pandemic did little to protect children. She says, instead, it showed the community that abuse only transforms its shape.

Guadalupe County applauds the daily heroic efforts of 9-1-1 dispatchers

Cindy Aguirre-Herrera

(Seguin) -- Guadalupe County is applauding the efforts of a group of heroes that often times goes unnoticed but is the first group of people you think of when there is an emergency.

The Guadalupe County Commissioners Court recently recognized its 9-1-1 dispatchers as part of National Telecommunicators Week.

Showing his appreciation for these men and women before the court was Guadalupe

County Sheriff Arnold Zwicke. Zwicke says his dispatch center is the heartbeat of any agency and is what initiates those life saving measures during a medical or public emergency.

“Today, we honor, and we can’t just thank them enough for the job they do, the difference they make when someone calls in needing help. They are our unsung heroes that don’t receive that recognition except for once a year unfortunately,” said Zwicke.

In celebrating their hard work, Zwicke applauded the dispatchers and their 67 years of total experience in emergency dispatch services.

“To give you a little bit of history of Oct. 20 through Sept. 2021, last budget year, 22, 011, 911 calls. That’s a total of 16, 973 calls for service also dispatching constables, fire departments, highway patrol, game wardens and whoever else may cross through our county. So far this budget year, they have had 1,719 911 calls and 8,101 calls for service,” said Zwicke.

Each of the dispatchers were invited and publicly recognized at a recent meeting of the Guadalupe County Commissioners Court. Each employee also received a small gift as a token of appreciation from the Guadalupe County Sheriff’s Office. Recognition of dispatchers is held each year during the second week in April.

Guadalupe County honors animal control officers

(Seguin) – An expression of sincere thanks and appreciation is being extended this month to the employees of Guadalupe County’s Animal Control program. As part of National Animal Care and Control Appreciation Week, the program’s four employees and set of volunteers are being honored for their often times difficult task of protecting the public along with the helpless animals and pets that are rescued from injury, disease, abuse and starvation.

Acknowledging their contributions in the safety of all citizens was Guadalupe County Sheriff Arnold Zwicke who recently honored this team before members of the Guadalupe County Commissioners Court.

Zwicke says not only do they work long hours of service, but they do so while delivering the most efficient level of customer service.

“I can’t say enough about these guys. These are guys are probably the most loved, the most hated people in Guadalupe County depending on which side of the fence you are on, and I think a lot of it is people thinking with their heart and not their head. These guys have to follow state laws. They have the unpleasant job of having to put down dogs sometimes. They do a tremendous job working with not only the dogs that we have in the ordinance but also the livestock, the wildlife – all the different calls that they may encounter each and every day, so I want to thank them and take time to recognize them today,” said Zwicke.

He says not only is the county growing but so is the number of times in which they put themselves in potentially dangerous situations to protect the health and welfare of animals and the public.

“We are here today to represent 35 years of experience in the animal control service. To give you an example of what goes on, last budget year – 5,458 calls for service, 508 animals were impounded, 118 redeemed by owner and 373 adopted and rescued which is a 97 percent adoption, redemption rate which is awesome. So far this year, 2,616 calls for service, 293 impounded animals, 67 owner redeemed and 210 adopted or rescued and so far this year, a 95 percent adoption and redemption rate,” said Zwicke.

Personally recognized for their service to the county were Supervisor Doug Pyatt; Officer Wayne Seidel; Officer Jakob Boone and Officer Alex Jones. A pair of volunteers who also assist in the animal services’ daily operations were also recognized for their contributions.

“At the beginning of the pandemic, we started seeing different types of cases. Instead of our usual child sexual abuse and child physical abuse which we see the vast majority of our cases, we started seeing results of 911 calls or hospitalizations or ER visits, so we started seeing more domestic violence cases, more broken bones, drug endangered children, people who are riding in vehicles with people under the influence. Those were the kinds of cases that we started seeing while the country was shut down and people were sent home,” said Williams.

Williams says the years of staying within our homes was challenging especially for her team of professionals who did the best that it could of staying on top of the abuse and ensuring that kids were being protected as much as possible.

“And then once the children started coming back out of their homes and doing summer camps and especially when they returned back to school, that’s when we started seeing a huge influx of sexual abuse cases and physical abuse cases that were taking place during that time where everybody was told to stay home. So that was a struggle for our staff knowing the trends of the types of cases that we see day in and day out knowing that those cases were not coming in but absolutely knowing that there’s no way that that just magically just stopped

happening in our community was a great concern and then to have those really difficult cases of people who sometimes were badly injured or were in some serious danger of death just be the shift during that time was really difficult for our staff and our own mental health as we are walking alongside everyone in this community with the pandemic and the unknown with that and now we are also taking on this kind of shift in those kinds of cases,” said Williams.

She says this past year especially proved very tough for some of our youngest and most vulnerable citizens.

“When the kids started going back to school, I guess we started seeing a lot more of our sexual abuse and physical abuse cases and we still see the gamut of all of them and have had some pretty serious domestic violence and gun related cases over the past year or so but this 893 is definitely more in line with our pre-pandemic norms. We definitely have seen more kids in this last year than we did in the previous two years,” said Williams.

Among the 15 locations hosting pinwheels are the Guadalupe County Courthouse; Texas Lutheran University at Hwy. 46; Faith Lutheran Church, McQueeney Baptist Church, Veterans Memorial Park, Cibolo Soccer Fields, the Schertz Police Department and the First Presbyterian Church in Seguin.

Those wishing to join the fight against child abuse are encouraged to sign-up as a Champion for Courageous Children. The campaign is a fundraising effort for the advocacy center. Those wishing to get started are asked to text GCCAC to 44-321. They can also call 830-303-4760.

The pinwheels will remain planted through Monday, May 2.

Reports: TSA No Longer Enforcing Masks

(Washington, DC) -- The TSA is reportedly no longer enforcing the mask mandates on airplanes. Several reports say the agency has immediately stopped enforcing the mandate on planes and other forms of transportation after a judge struck down the CDC rule. The federal judge in Florida said the CDC overstepped its authority by ordering and extending the requirement. Earlier, the White House said the Justice Department will decide whether to challenge the order.

COVID Cases Rising In New York City

(New York, NY) -- Coronavirus cases are on the rise in New York City. The positivity rate has slowly been rising over the last month and a half and now sits at about four and a half percent. New York City officials expect the COVID risk level to go from low to medium at some point this week. The city's health department is urging folks to get tested if you were at a holiday gathering over this past weekend.

Vets Warn Of Dangers Of Easter Candy For Pets

(Nashville, TN) -- Veterinarians are reminding pet owners of the dangers that candy can pose to pets if they eat it. Dr. James Barr with BluePearl in Nashville tells WTVF they see the number of chocolate toxicity cases more than quadruple around Easter each year. Both jelly beans and chocolate have ingredients that are toxic to dogs. Symptoms normally occur between roughly four and 24 hours after being consumed, but treatment may be needed right away.

Veterinary Burnout Due To Pandemic

(Sacramento, CA) -- The pandemic is causing burnout and health concerns to those in the medical field, including veterinarians. Pet owners increased substantially during the pandemic, especially the first year. It's reported that about twenty-three million people adopted a pet during that time. With people home, they paid more attention to their pets so things like coughing or other symptoms were noticed. Veterinarians became overworked and understaffed. They dealt with fatigue and empathy overload. As a result, the Veterinary Mental Health Initiative was organized. It offers free support and mental health care to vets across the country. Since 2020, over 200 vets and technicians have benefited from the initiative.
